

Restoring the NHS in England as an accountable public service

The proposed NHS Reinstatement Bill

The proposed National Health Service Reinstatement Bill explained and set out in this document has been drafted by Peter Roderick with the assistance of Professor Allyson Pollock, having benefitted from discussions with individuals and organisations concerned about the increasing role of the market over the last twenty five years in the NHS in England.

We wish to consult on the Bill with those who share our concern and commitment to reinstating fully the NHS as an accountable public service as smoothly as possible and with only a minimal and exceptional role for commercial companies.

Responses can be sent to either or both of us by 15th December 2014.

STOP PRESS, 15th September 2014

We have been overwhelmed by responses to the proposed Bill, and so have set up a specific gmail account that we will monitor regularly. We would be grateful if people would email responses to nhsrbconsultation@gmail.com. Thank you.

Brief summary of the Bill

In short, the Bill proposes to reverse 25 years of marketization in the NHS by abolishing the purchaser-provider split, re-establishing public bodies and fully restoring the NHS in England as an accountable public service. It draws on some of the best examples of NHS administration over its history, retains some features of the 2012 reforms and would be implemented on a timescale determined by the Secretary of State.

It would:

- reinstate the government's duty to provide the NHS in England,
- re-establish NHS England as a special health authority with regional committees and modified functions,
- re-establish District Health Authorities, with Family Health Services Committees to administer arrangements with GPs, dentists and others,
- abolish marketised bodies such as NHS trusts, NHS foundation trusts and clinical commissioning groups, as well as Monitor, the regulator of NHS foundation trusts and commercial companies,
- end virtually all commissioning and allow commercial companies to provide services only if the NHS could not do so and otherwise patients would suffer,
- abolish competition,
- re-establish Community Health Councils to represent the interest of the public in the NHS,
- stop licence conditions taking effect which have been imposed by Monitor on NHS foundation trusts and that will have the effect of reducing by April 2016 the number of services that they currently have to provide,
- bring the terms and conditions of staff employed in providing NHS services under the NHS Staff Council,
- prohibit ratification of the Transatlantic Trade and Investment Partnership and other international treaties without the approval of Parliament (and the devolved bodies) if they would cover the NHS.

Many further and consequential amendments would also be necessary, for example relating to public health and GP services, and these are currently covered in Schedules to the Bill.

Part 1 of this document explains the clauses of the Bill. Part 2 provides background notes on some of the Schedules (page 11 onwards). Part 3 sets out the Bill (page 20 onwards).

Part 1: Clause-by-Clause summaries

Clause 1 – Secretary of State’s duties to promote and provide a comprehensive health service

Clause 1(1) would reinstate the Secretary of State’s legal duty to provide the NHS in England. It would do so by effectively repealing the abolition of that duty as a result of section 1 of the Health and Social Care Act 2012, and by reproducing the corresponding provision that applied from 1946 until 2006.

Until 2006, the government’s overarching duty had been “to provide or secure effective provision” of services. The NHS Act 2006 deleted the word “effective”, and also de-coupled this duty from the duty to “promote” a comprehensive service.

The title of section 1 of the 2006 Act ("Secretary of State's duty to promote health service") would revert to the title of section 1 of the National Health Service Act 1977, which made no distinction between the connected duties of promotion and provision.

Clause 2 - Abolition of the duties of autonomy

This clause would repeal the two sections inserted into the 2006 Act which require the Secretary of State and the NHS Commissioning Board, respectively, to have regard to the desirability of securing, so far as consistent with the interests of the health service, that any other person exercising functions in relation to the health service or providing services for its purposes is free to exercise those functions or provide those services in the manner that it considers most appropriate, and that unnecessary burdens are not imposed on any such person. These duties are incompatible with a national health service which the Secretary of State would, under this Bill, again have the duty to provide.

However, certain elements of section 1D of the 2006 Act in relation to the Secretary of State’s power of directions would be retained under Clause 12 of the Bill.

Clause 3 - Secretary of State's duty to provide certain services

This clause would insert a new section 3 into the NHS Act 2006.

The new section 3(1) would set out the four basic categories of services that it would be the Secretary of State’s duty to provide or secure the effective provision of:

- the long-standing duty to provide the services listed in new subsection (see new section 3(2));
- functions relating to high security psychiatric services (see Clause 4);
- duties and powers relating to provision of medical, dental, ophthalmic and pharmaceutical services (see Parts 4-7); and

- functions in relation to other services, for example as regards school children and blood supplies (see Schedule 1 of the 2006 Act, as amended by Schedule 1 of this Bill).

The new section 3(2) would reinstate the duty of the Secretary of State to provide “throughout England” hospital accommodation, services and facilities as in section 3(1) of the 2006 Act, re-applying the duty as it was before the 2012 Health and Social Care Act. This would replace the current duty on clinical commissioning groups (CCGs) to arrange provision for persons for whom they are responsible, and CCGs would be abolished (see Clause 13).

Clause 4 - High security psychiatric services

This would re-establish the Secretary of State’s duty to provide high security psychiatric hospitals and services under section 4(1) of the NHS Act 2006. The duty would also extend to maintaining the same, as under the 1977 NHS Act (but which was dropped under section 41 of the Health Act 1999).

Clause 5 (and Schedule 1) - Other services

Schedule 1 of the 2006 Act set out a number of additional services in relation to which the Secretary of State had obligations, dating back to the 1977 Act and even, in some instances, the 1946 Act. They covered medical inspection of pupils, contraceptive services, vehicles for disabled persons, a microbiological service and research. The 2012 Act added provisions relating to the weighing and measuring of children and the supply of blood and human tissue.

The obligations for most of these services would revert to the Secretary of State. Background information on these services is provided below in Part 2.

Clause 6 - Public health functions of the Secretary of State and local authorities

The 2012 Act created public health functions as a new category of services divided between the Secretary of State and local authorities. Neither of these bodies now have duties to provide or to secure provision or to make arrangements for provision as regards public health, only a metaphorically-expressed duty to “take steps” as they consider “appropriate” for protecting the public from disease or other health dangers or for improving the health of people. The Bill needs to address these functions (hence the envisaged Schedule 2), including, for example, whether there is a need to re-establish a health promotion body. More information is provided below in Part 2.

Clause 7 - Distribution of functions

This Clause would re-establish NHS England as a Special Health Authority – its form before the 2012 Act - with Regional Committees, along with District Health Authorities (having Family Health Service Committees).

Clause 8 - NHS England and Regional Committees

The National Health Service Commissioning Board – the current NHS England’s formal name – would be abolished and replaced by The National Health Service England Authority to be called “NHS England”. It would have a number of Regional Committees covering the whole of England, and Schedule 3 would provide details of its establishment.

Clause 8(4) would set out the main duty of NHS England. This would be to exercise on behalf of the Secretary of State some of his duties under the National Health Service Act 2006, by providing or securing effective provision of the services or facilities referred to in subsection (5) in accordance with regulations.

The specific services and facilities listed in subsection (5) are those for which the current NHS England may be required to make arrangements in accordance with regulations under section 3B of the 2006 Act - dental services; services or facilities for members of the armed forces, their families or prisoner – as well as others that may be prescribed if more appropriate for NHS England to provide or secure effective provision of rather than the Secretary of State or District Health Authorities (or their Family Health Services Committees). In deciding whether it would be appropriate, the Secretary of State would have to have regard to the same matters as currently under section 3B(3) and (4).

NHS England would perform its functions through its Regional Committees, save to the extent that regulations provide otherwise; and regulations could provide otherwise where the Secretary of State considers that provision is more appropriate on a national basis rather than on regional bases.

Three preconditions are set out in Clause 8(12), which are intended to have the effect of entitling NHS England to arrange for service provision outside the NHS exceptionally – but necessarily to meet all reasonable requirements.

Clause 12 of the Bill covers directions to NHS England.

Clause 9 - District Health Authorities

Under Clause 9, District Health Authorities (DHAs) would become the heart of NHS services on the ground. They would have the duty to exercise on behalf of the Secretary of State his duty in section 1(1) of the National Health Service Act 2006 by exercising his or her functions under specified provisions of that Act, including hospital and other accommodation; medical, dental, nursing and ambulance services; facilities for the care of expectant and nursing mothers and young children; facilities for the prevention of illness and the aftercare of persons who have suffered from illness; and services under Schedule 1 of the 2006 Act and Schedule 5 of this Bill. So for example, hospitals currently run by NHS trusts and NHS foundation trusts (which would be abolished) would be transferred to the DHAs.

As for NHS England, DHAs would only be able to arrange for service provision outside the NHS exceptionally; and would be subject to directions under Clause 12.

Schedule 4 of the Bill would set out the basis for the constitution, membership etc. of DHAs, and the basis for their boundaries needs consultation. The relationship of these boundaries with those of local government (often referred to as 'co-terminosity') will be particularly important in ensuring the closest cooperation between health and social services.

Schedule 5 would set out the many other functions that were necessarily part of the Secretary of State's functions for the running of the NHS, and the list will be finalised after consultation.

Each DHA would have a Family Health Services Committee having the functions set out in Clause 10.

Clause 10 - Family Health Services Committees

The duty of each Family Health Services Committee would be, in accordance with regulations, to administer on behalf of the DHA the arrangements made under Parts 4-7 of the National Health Service Act 2006 for the provision of medical, dental, ophthalmic and pharmaceutical services for the district of the Authority, and to perform such other functions relating to those services as may be prescribed.

Schedule 4, Part 2 makes further provision in respect of Family Health Services Committees and the discharge of their functions. Background information on the current legal provisions for medical services is set out in Part 2 below of this document.

Clause 11 - Special health authorities

Clause 11 makes clear that the Secretary of State retains full powers to establish Special Health Authorities for performing any functions which he may direct the body to perform on his behalf, or on behalf of NHS England or DHAs. This would be a possible approach to provide planning for cities such as London, as an alternative, for example, to city-based and enhanced local government representation on Regional Committees of NHS England.

Section 28A of the National Health Service Act 2006 is repealed, as this limits the duration of new Special Health Authorities to a maximum period of three years.

Clause 12 – Directions

This clause would give the Secretary of State a general power of giving directions to NHS England, a DHA, including any Family Health Services Committee, a Special Health Authority, the National Institute for Health and Care Excellence, the Health and Social Care Information Centre, and any other persons who are exceptionally providing other prescribed services.

However, this power would not usually be unrestricted. The Secretary of State would be obliged to have regard to the desirability, so far as consistent with the interests of the health service and relevant to the exercise of the power in all circumstances, of protecting and promoting the health of patients and the public, and of the bodies being free to exercise their functions in the manner that they consider best calculated to promote the NHS.

These directions must be contained in regulations, except in a genuine emergency, so that the exercise of executive power would be open to Parliamentary scrutiny and procedure.

This provision is a modified version of the duties of autonomy (the hands-off clauses) introduced by the 2012 Act and which would be abolished by Clause 2.

Clauses 13 – 16 - Abolition of bodies, and staff transfer

Clauses 13 - 15 (and Schedule 6) would make provision for abolishing CCGs, NHS trusts and NHS foundation trusts. Their property, rights and liabilities would transfer to the Secretary of State, or to any other NHS body determined by him or her, such as DHAs. Clauses 13(5), 14(5) and 15(4) require regard to be had by the Secretary of State to Schedule 8 in connection with the abolition of these bodies in order to ensure as smooth a transition as possible in returning to a fully restored NHS.

Clause 16 would require the Secretary of State, after consultation with trade unions, to make regulations which would set out the terms and conditions applying to the transfer of staff from NHS trusts, NHS foundation trusts and CCGs to DHAs, NHS England and other NHS bodies. These include entitlement to redundancy payments, particularly for senior staff whose job loss is technical rather than real.

Clause 17 - Community Health Councils

This clause (with Schedule 7) would re-establish Community Health Councils, with the duty of representing the interests of the local public in the health service. These were initially established under section 9 of the NHS Reorganisation Act 1973, and were abolished in England by section 22 of the NHS Reform and Health Care Professions Act 2002.

Clauses 18 and 19 - Abolition of Monitor, transfer to the CQC and Competition

Clause 18 would abolish Monitor, which currently regulates NHS foundation trusts and licenses commercial companies and voluntary organisations. Many of its functions, particularly those relating to competition under sections 72-80 of the 2012 Act, would also be abolished. Those remaining would transfer to the Care Quality Commission (CQC).

The National Health Service (Procurement, Patient Choice and Competition) (No. 2) Regulations 2013 (SI 2013 No. 500) would be repealed.

Currently, there is no objective underpinning Monitor's (and under this Bill after transfer the CQC's) powers and duties – unlike Ofgem, for example. This Clause would make clear that the end to which its residual functions under the 2012 Act must be directed is the comprehensive health service that it is the Secretary of State's duty to promote and provide as a service of social solidarity based on cooperation.

By inserting into the 2012 Act a new section 61A(2) and by repealing section 62(9), the duty of Monitor to act consistently with the Secretary of State's duties to promote and provide would be reinstated (and transferred to the CQC). Parliament had imposed that duty on Monitor both in section 32 of the 2006 Act and in section 3 of the Health and Social Care (Community Health and Standards) Act 2003 (although in those enactments Monitor's duty also extended to acting consistently with the Secretary of State's duty in relation to university clinical teaching and research). The 2012 Act, in section 62(9), only imposed a duty on Monitor in relation to the duty to promote under section 1(1) of the 2006 Act, hence its proposed repeal under this Clause.

Clause 20      Continuity of mandatory services

Monitor has imposed licence conditions on NHS foundation trusts under which currently mandatory services - basically those which had to be provided, under the old NHS foundation trust authorisation system - will cease to be mandatory after April 2016, and a new set of mandatory services will be put in place. Under its associated guidance issued in March 2013, Monitor asks commissioners to consider the current list, and states that it expects the number of mandatory services to decrease as a result. Clause 20 would have the effect of annulling these licence conditions.

Clause 21      National terms and conditions

This Clause is intended to ensure that the UK-wide 'Agenda for Change' system under the auspices of the non-statutory NHS Staff Council that has been in place since 2004 would apply to all staff employed by those who provide NHS services, regardless of whether the employer is in the public, commercial or voluntary sector. Currently this system only applies to NHS trusts, NHS Foundation Trusts, Special Health Authorities, NHS England, CCGs, The Health and Social Care Information Centre and NICE. Recognising the NHS as a national service and the desirability of staff being able to move freely between its constituent parts without suffering detriment would help ensure fairness, equity and equal value for NHS staff and good patient care. This Clause would not affect those staff not currently covered by the Agenda for Change system such as hospital doctors and dentists and very senior managers.

Clause 22 – Treaty requirements

25. This Clause follows the spirit of the example of section 6 of the European Assembly Elections Act 1978 which provided for any increase in the powers of the Assembly, now called the European Parliament, to be ratified by the United Kingdom only if there had been prior approval by an Act of Parliament.

26. The Clause would make it impossible for any trade, investment or similar international agreement – such as the proposed Transatlantic Trade and Investment Partnership (TTIP) being negotiated between the European Union and the US - in effect to legislate for the NHS without Parliament (or the relevant devolved legislature) giving its approval prior to signature or agreement.

Clause 23 - Commencement and transitional arrangements

Clause 23 gives flexibility to the Secretary of State in the way in which the Act, except for section 1, is brought into effect; and thus the timescale for its implementation. How this flexibility would be exercised in practice would depend on considering the impact of a further major reorganisation on the appointed day necessary to reinstate the NHS (on the one hand) and the undesirability of giving vested interests a post-enactment opportunity to delay implementation (on the other). Transitional arrangements would be set out in Schedule 8 in order to ensure as smooth a transition as possible in returning to a fully restored NHS, and Clauses 13(5), 14(5) and 15(4) require regard to be had by the Secretary of State to Schedule 8 in connection with the abolition of CCGs, NHS trusts and NHS foundation trusts.

Part 2: Schedules - Background Notes

Preliminary

Schedules have been included in the Bill in order to indicate the nature and range of supplementary issues, transitional and consequential amendments and repeals entailed by a new Bill. Many of the matters covered could be dealt with in a separate “NHS (Consequential Provisions) Bill” that would be enacted simultaneously, as happened in 2006.

Some of the “standard” type of Schedules – such as those covering organizational aspects for NHS England and its Regional Committees (Schedule 3), DHAs (Schedule 4) and Community Health Councils (Schedule 7) – currently have no content, or indicative content based on previous legislation.

Amongst the Schedules dealing with services are those relating to the Secretary of State and other services (Schedule 1), Public Health (Schedule 2) and further functions of the DHAs (Schedule 5).

Modifications to the provisions and functions relating to medical, dental, pharmaceutical and ophthalmic services are currently envisaged in Schedule 9, Part 1. After consultation at least some of these may be relocated to the main body of the Bill.

The notes below provide some background information to assist consideration of the contents of Schedule 1 and 2 and of Schedule 9, Part 1 as regards medical services.

Schedule 1 (Further provision about the Secretary of State and services) and Schedule 2 (Public Health)

Schedule 1 of the 2006 NHS Act contains several provisions of a public health nature, which now need to be considered in the light of the public health functions of the Secretary of State and local authorities (see Box below).

Box: The public health functions of the Secretary of State and local authorities since the 2012 Act: ss.2A and 2B of the 2006 Act (as inserted by the 2012 Act)

National Health Service Act 2006

Provision for protection or improvement of public health

2A Secretary of State's duty as to protection of public health

(1) The Secretary of State must take such steps as the Secretary of State considers appropriate for the purpose of protecting the public in England from disease or other dangers to health.

(2) The steps that may be taken under subsection (1) include—

- (a) the conduct of research or such other steps as the Secretary of State considers appropriate for advancing knowledge and understanding;
- (b) providing microbiological or other technical services (whether in laboratories or otherwise);
- (c) providing vaccination, immunisation or screening services;
- (d) providing other services or facilities for the prevention, diagnosis or treatment of illness;
- (e) providing training;
- (f) providing information and advice;
- (g) making available the services of any person or any facilities.

(3) Subsection (4) applies in relation to any function under this section which relates to—

- (a) the protection of the public from ionising or non-ionising radiation, and
- (b) a matter in respect of which the Health and Safety Executive has a function.

(4) In exercising the function, the Secretary of State must—

- (a) consult the Health and Safety Executive, and
- (b) have regard to its policies.

2B Functions of local authorities and Secretary of State as to improvement of public health

(1) Each local authority must take such steps as it considers appropriate for improving the health of the people in its area.

(2) The Secretary of State may take such steps as the Secretary of State considers appropriate for improving the health of the people of England.

(3) The steps that may be taken under subsection (1) or (2) include—

- (a) providing information and advice;
- (b) providing services or facilities designed to promote healthy living (whether by helping individuals to address behaviour that is detrimental to health or in any other way);
- (c) providing services or facilities for the prevention, diagnosis or treatment of illness;
- (d) providing financial incentives to encourage individuals to adopt healthier lifestyles;
- (e) providing assistance (including financial assistance) to help individuals to minimise any risks to health arising from their accommodation or environment;
- (f) providing or participating in the provision of training for persons working or seeking to work in the field of health improvement;
- (g) making available the services of any person or any facilities.

(4) The steps that may be taken under subsection (1) also include providing grants or loans (on such terms as the local authority considers appropriate).

(5) In this section, “local authority” means—

- (a) a county council in England;
- (b) a district council in England, other than a council for a district in a county for which there is a county council;
- (c) a London borough council;
- (d) the Council of the Isles of Scilly;
- (e) the Common Council of the City of London.

Medical inspection of pupils

Since the 2012 Act, a local authority has responsibilities for the medical inspection and treatment of pupils. This was previously the responsibility of the Secretary of State under the 2006 Act. The Explanatory Notes to the 2012 Act suggest that this transfer is in the context of the public health functions of local authorities under section 2B.

Under section 48 of the Education Act 1944, local education authorities were given a duty to provide for medical inspection of pupils, and a duty to make arrangements to secure “comprehensive facilities for free medical treatment are available”. This duty was repealed by the 1973 NHS Reorganisation Act, replacing it with a duty on the Secretary of State to make provision for the medical and dental inspection and treatment of pupils. The NHS Act 1977 replaced this duty with a power for the Secretary of State, by arrangement with the local authority, to provide for both medical and dental inspections and treatment.

Weighing and measuring of children

Since the 2012 Act, local authorities have the power (not duty) to provide for the weighing and measuring of pupils under 12 at its schools, and the power to arrange the same with private schools and registered child minders. From 2008 (when these provisions were first introduced, by section 143 of the Health and Social Care Act 2008) until the 2012 Act, the Secretary of State had the power to provide by arrangement with local education authorities, or such private schools and minders.

The Secretary of State has the power to make regulations authorizing disclosure of information about the children to those carrying out the weighing and measuring, prescribing how to conduct the activities, authorizing disclosure of the results to parents and regulating the processing of the results. The current regulations are set out in Part 3 of The Local Authority (Public Health, Health and Wellbeing Boards and Health Scrutiny) Regulations 2013 (S.I. No. 218), which require local authorities to disclose the results to the Health and Social Care Information Centre, which is given the power to disclose it to any other person “with a view to enabling further processing of the information for the purposes of research, monitoring, audit or the planning of services, or for any purpose connected with public health, subject to the condition that the information may be disclosed only in a form in which no individual child can be identified”.

From 2008 – 2013, it appears that Primary Care Trusts carried out the weighing and measuring under the annual National Child Measurement Programme (The National Child Measurement Programme Regulations 2008 (S.I. No. 3080)).

Supply of blood and other human tissues

The 2012 Act (section 17(9)) imposed a new duty on the Secretary of State to make arrangements for collecting, screening, analyzing, processing and supplying blood and other tissues (and related services) and for facilitating organ and tissue transplantation. According to the Explanatory Notes to the 2012 Act, this new specific duty was needed because the Secretary of State’s duty to provide under section 3 of the 2006 Act was abolished, along with other changes to section 2 (general power). Those Notes also state that “[a]s now, the functions would be performed by NHS Blood and Transplant, a Special Health Authority, rather than by the Department of Health”.

Contraceptive services

Since the 1973 NHS Reorganisation Act, the Secretary of State has had the duty to arrange the giving of advice on contraception, the medical examination and treatment of those seeking such advice and the supply of contraceptive substances and appliances. This duty remains in place.

Provision of vehicles for disabled persons

Since the 2012 Act, CCGs have a power to make arrangements for providing vehicles including wheelchairs for persons for whom they are responsible and who appear to have a physical impairment. They also have the power to make arrangements to adapt, maintain, repair and insure the vehicle, including providing a structure in which to keep it. CCGs are also enabled to make grants for adapting (etc.), for buying fuel and learning to drive it.

This was previously the power of the Secretary of State under the 2006 Act, which in turn was an updated version of the power in the 1977 Act (to provide “invalid carriages for persons appearing to him to be suffering from severe physical defect or disability”).

Provision of a microbiological service by the Secretary of State

Under the 1977 Act, a power was conferred on the Secretary of State to “provide a microbiological service, which may include the provision of laboratories, for the control of the spread of infectious diseases (and the Secretary of State may allow persons to use services provided at such laboratories on such terms, including terms as to charges, as he thinks fit)”. This service constituted “the public health laboratory service”. The Public Health Laboratory Service Act 1979 (enacted at the very end of the Callaghan government) extended this power so that it included the power to “carry on such other activities as in his opinion can conveniently be carried on in conjunction with that service”, as well as powers to charge and to exercise the power for non-NHS purposes.

Since the 2012 Act “providing microbiological or other technical services (whether in laboratories or otherwise)” has been one of the listed “steps that may be taken” pursuant to the Secretary of State’s duty under section 2A to “take steps as [he] considers appropriate for the purpose of protecting the public in England from disease or other dangers to health”. The power in paragraph 12 of Schedule 1 has been modified to reflect that.

Note that the 1977 Act continued the “Public Health Laboratory Service Board”, a body corporate,” for the purpose of exercising such functions with respect to the administration of the public health laboratory service”. It was abolished by section 4 of the Health and Social Care (Community Health and Standards) Act 2003.

[Schedule 1 of the 2006 Act also covers research functions]

A historical note on the functions of local authorities under the NHS Act 1946 is included in the Appendix to this Part 2.

Schedule 9, Part 1 - Medical, dental, pharmaceutical and ophthalmic services

This Part of the Bill would contain amendments to those Parts of the 2006 Act that relate to these services, as they would become administered by a DHA's Family Health Services Committee. The remainder of this note relates only to medical services.

Since the 2012 Act, NHS England has an over-arching duty, to the extent that it considers necessary to meet all reasonable requirements, to exercise its powers so as to provide primary medical services. (This was a duty previously imposed on area-based Primary Care Trusts, initially introduced in the 2003 Health and Social Care (Community Health and Standards) Act 2003.)

NHS England has 3 specific powers in this regard - also previously conferred on PCTs, and subject to directions from the Secretary of State under s.98A(3) of the 2006 Act as inserted by s.49 of the 2012 Act – which form the basis for the 3 medical services contract types:

- (a) A general and widely-expressed power to make arrangements as it considers appropriate, including entering contracts with any person, under s.83(2) of the 2006 Act – such as commercial companies or voluntary organisations. These have become known as Alternative Personal Medical Services (APMS) contracts, though the term does not appear in primary legislation (nor, it seems, in regulations). This power was first introduced in the 2003 Act; and is not subject to additional requirements in the same way as both of the following two powers are (except for directions under s.98A(3): see the Alternative Provider Medical Services Directions 2013);
- (b) A power to enter into a contract with specified persons under ss. 84 et seq., referred to as general medical services (GMS) contracts. These are subject to several requirements, set out in the primary Act, in extensive regulations (see the NHS (General Medical Services Contracts) Regulations 2004, as amended, most recently last March by the NHS (General Medical Services Contracts and Personal Medical Services Agreements) Amendment Regulations 2014), and also in directions from the Secretary of State. GMS contracts can be made with medical practitioners, and also with (e.g.) companies owned by them, and with NHS trusts. This legal route is not open to commercial companies such as Virgin or United Health (who can be awarded APMS contracts).

The statutory origin of this power was the duty imposed (first) on area-based Executive Councils in s.33 of the 1946 Act and (later) on various health authorities under 29 of the 1977 Act (since abolished) to make arrangements with medical practitioners for the provision by them of personal medical services for all persons in the area who wished to take advantage of the arrangements.

- (c) A power to make agreements with specified persons under s.92 et seq., referred to as “s.92 arrangements) and as personal medical services (PMS) contracts. Similar to GMS contracts, but offering more local flexibility, PMS contracts are also subject to several requirements in regulations (see the NHS (Personal Medical Services Agreements) Regulations 2004, as amended), and in directions. This mechanism was first introduced as a “pilot scheme” in the 1997 NHS (Primary Care) Act – one of the last Acts of the Major government – and made permanent in the 2003 Act.

It would be consistent with the scheme of the Bill to transfer NHS England’s powers to DHAs in order for them to be administered by their Family Health Services Committees, and to permit the power to enter into APMS contracts to be exercised only if it is not reasonably practicable for a DHA to provide the services, or for a GMS or PMS contract to be entered into, and if an APMS contract is necessary to meet all reasonable requirements (i.e., effectively the same preconditions for commercial company involvement as in Clause 9(4) for DHAs (and Clause 8(12) for NHS England).

Appendix – historical note

The functions of local authorities under the NHS Act 1946

County and borough councils - termed local health authorities (LHAs) - were given a critical role in the NHS from the start, under ministerial control. (NHS Act 1946, Part III, ss.19-30).

Summary

Scope

They were required under section 20 to submit to the Minister their proposals relating to eight categories of service which subject to the Minister's approval it was their duty to carry out. These categories related to health centres, care of mothers and young children, midwifery, health visiting, vaccination and immunization (against small pox and diphtheria as a minimum), ambulance services and the prevention of illness, care and after-care. 'Domestic help' formed a ninth category.

Charging

Means-tested charges could be made for domestic help and services related to prevention of illness, care and after-care; and also for "articles" relating to the care of mothers and young children.

Duties

No duty was expressed as having to meet "reasonable requirements", but the number of midwives for stated purposes had to be "adequate for the needs of the area". Only in the case of health centres was there a direct LHA duty to provide and to employ staff (though not all staff). Midwives, health visitors, home visitors and ambulance staff could be employees of LHAs or voluntary organizations. Ambulance staff could also be employed by private companies or other public bodies; and private companies could also provide vaccines and sera to the Minister for onward supply. These duties were either transferred or abolished under the NHS Reorganisation Act 1973. More detail on the nine categories is set out below.

Service categories

Health centres

Amongst these eight categories, the only one which it was the authority's duty directly to provide (equip and maintain to the satisfaction of the Minister) was health centres, under section 21. These were premises at which facilities would be available for at least one of six categories of service - general medical services, dental and pharmaceutical services; for the provision or organisation of any of the services which the LHA are required or empowered to provide; services of specialists or other services provided for outpatients under Part III; or for the exercise of the powers conferred on the LHA by s.179 of the Public Health Act 1936, or s.298 Public Health (London) Act 1936; for the publication of information on questions relating to health or disease; and for the delivery of lectures and the display of pictures or cinematograph films in which such questions are dealt with. The authority was also obliged to provide staff at the centres to the Minister's satisfaction (but not medical and dental staff providing (Part IV services).

Care of mothers and young children

The LHA had a duty under section 22 “to make arrangements for the care, including in particular dental care, of expectant and nursing mothers and of children who have not attained the age of 5 years and are not attending primary schools maintained by a local health authority” – and were empowered to make reasonable charges (subject to ministerial approval) “in respect of articles provided” having regard to the means of those persons. They were also empowered with approval to contribute to any voluntary organization formed for such purposes.

Midwifery

LHAs became the local supervising authority under Midwives Acts 1902-1936, and were given the duty to “secure” - whether by making arrangements with Boards of Governors of teaching hospitals, hospital management committees or voluntary organizations for the employment by those Boards, committees or organizations of certified midwives or by themselves employing such midwives - “that the number of certified midwives so employed who are available in the authority’s area for attendance on women in their homes as midwives, or as maternity nurses during childbirth and from time to time thereafter during a period not less than the lying-in period, is adequate for the needs of the area”.

Health visiting

LHAs were also given the duty under section 24 “to make provision in their area for the visiting of persons in their homes by visitors, to be called ‘health visitors’, for the purpose of giving advice as to the care of young children, persons suffering from illness and expectant or nursing mothers, and as to the measures necessary to prevent the spread of infection.”. This could be done by making arrangements with voluntary organizations for the employment by those organizations of health visitors, or by the LHA itself employing health visitors.

Home nursing

A similar duty was imposed on LHAs under section 25 to “to make provision...for securing the attendance of nurses on persons who require nursing in their own homes”; again, by making arrangements with voluntary organizations for the employment by them of nurses or by the LHA itself employing such nurses.

Vaccination and immunization

Each LHA was obliged to make arrangements with medical practitioners for small pox vaccinations and diphtheria immunizations, under section 26. They were also empowered to make similar arrangements against any other disease if approved by the Minister; and were obliged to do so if directed by him or her. The Minister was empowered – directly or by through arrangements with such persons as he or she thought fit (so including private companies) – to supply the vaccines, sera or other preparations free of charge.

Ambulance services

Under section 27, it was the duty of every LHA “to make provision for securing” that ambulances and other means of transport are available, where necessary, for the conveyance of persons suffering from illness or mental defectiveness, and of expectant or nursing mothers. This duty could be performed by the LHA itself providing the necessary ambulances etc. and the necessary staff, or by making arrangements with voluntary organizations “or other persons” for the provision by them of such ambulances, transport and staff. Of the LHA services, this is the only instance where it is specified that the arrangements can be made with persons other than voluntary organizations (e.g., with private companies).

Prevention of illness, care and after-care

Making arrangements for the purpose of the prevention of illness, the care of persons suffering from illness or mental defectiveness, or the after-care of such persons, was also a power given to LHAs, with ministerial approval. (It is curious that section 28 refers expressly to ministerial approval, because all these LHA services are subject to such approval under section 20, so it might be that this service was seen particularly as needing central control.) LHAs were empowered to make reasonable and means-tested charges (subject to ministerial approval); and could with approval contribute to voluntary organizations formed for these purposes.

Domestic help

An LHA was also empowered to “make such arrangements as the Minister may approve for providing domestic help for households where such help is required owing to the presence of any person who is ill, lying-in, an expectant mother, mentally defective, aged, or a child not over compulsory school age”. Again, reasonable and means-tested charges with ministerial approval could be made. Proposals for domestic help did not have to be submitted to the Minister under section 20 along with proposals for the other eight categories of service.
