The NHS

is being broken apart.

- The Health and Social Care Act removed the Secretary of State's legal duty to provide hospitals, ambulances, nursing and medical services... and more.

• This is the endgame for the NHS in England.

In our lifetime it is being quietly dismantled, brick by brick. There will never be a moment when it is announced as privatised, but one day we will turn around and it will be gone.

- If we believe the NHS is worth keeping, we need to reverse the Health and Social Care Act. We need legislation to reinstate the duty to provide care: The NHS Reinstatement Bill 2015. Support the Bill to re-establish the NHS.

What The Bill Does

The NHS Reinstatement Bill 2015 will restore the NHS to its proper place and prevent further damage to the NHS by:

- Reinstating the government's legal duty to provide key NHS services in England.
- Abolishing market structures like foundation trusts.
- Abolishing competition and contracts.
- Centralising PFI debt to protect individual trusts from its impact.
- Stopping immigration health charges.
- Stopping treaties like the Transatlantic Trade and Investment Partnership (TTIP) without Parliament's approval if they cover the NHS.
- Establishing area Health Boards from the bottom up.
- Re-establishing Community Health Councils for public accountability.
- Requiring national terms and conditions under the NHS Staff Council and Agenda for Change system.

Take Action

Contact the candidates who are standing in your constituency. Ask them whether they will support the NHS Reinstatement Bill 2015. You can find out who they are at:
